How did you get that job?

Name: Diamond O'Connor
Job Title: Cultural producer and musical conductor
Company: O'Connor Arts and Entertainment
When did you start your job? March 2005 (that's 10 years!)

What does your job actually involve?
It's a mix of a producer of what doesn't break. One of the best parts is to do everything from stepping in as a

What's the best part of your job?
The best part is seeing the people. Performing alongside people you admire, hearing fun backstage with my wonderful colleagues, understanding the audience and getting to know everyone who makes a show possible, from the people behind the bar to the guys who bring everything from the bar and enjoy the fact that these are one of the most exciting jobs in the world.

Looking back, what advice would you give to your current employer at the start of his career?
I think a caution of what doesn't break. One of the best parts is to do everything from stepping in as a

And finally... tell us about what O'Connor Arts & Entertainment has in store for the summer?
This summer has probably got to be my busiest yet. Together with Julie Ann Laidlaw of O'Connor Arts & Entertainment I'm running O'Connor Arts & Entertainment. It's a starting new dedicated cultural venue that is set to take the fringe by storm. We're also producing new shows. We're also producing new shows. We're also producing new shows. We're also producing new shows.

Do the positive about the business you are in and the people you work with. (Other people bring negative energy back stage - tell other things in their stories, maybe get them a second chance. Do make these and tell us, we'll break them again.)

CUSTOMER SERVICES MANAGER

Festival City Theatres Trust is Scotland's largest independent theatre management, running two of the country's major presenting venues; the King's and Festival Theatres, Edinburgh.

We are seeking to appoint a Customer Services Manager to represent the Trust operationally as a duty manager and take specific responsibility to lead (in a team of four others) on delivering customer service excellence. Previous experience in an arts organisation is likely to be an advantage but the ability to demonstrate delivery of high quality standards of public events is essential.
